

INTWINE

Created Crafted Curated

How would you portray it if the whole world was your home, and your job would allow you to always look at it from high up in the sky? Which colors, shapes, contours, and structures would be essential to you? How would you capture light and shadow, and how many brushstrokes would you need to bring a mighty mountain massif on canvas?

For 36 years, Beatrice Suter was a flight attendant and maître de cabine at Swissair and Swiss. Her countless encounters with people, their feelings, and the colors and scents of the world's cities have left a lasting impression on her, and are still a great inspiration for her work as an artist.

I am thrilled that Beatrice has chosen INTWINE for her first solo exhibition, and I hope you will be there when we open it.

BECOMING COLOUR BY BEATRICE SUTER

Opening: May 16, 2023, from 6 pm to 8 pm

The exhibition lasts from May 12 to August 29, 2023

WOMEN ARTISTS

"My ideas grow and take shape during the creation procedure."

– Beatrice Suter

"My profession allowed me to visit countless countries and interesting places and experience unforgettable encounters with people from various cultures. Learning about their customs and traditions opened my eyes to the world and its diversity."

Since your retirement, you have worked in-depth on your painting. How did it come about that you decided on this path? Drawing and painting have been with me all my life. The retirement made it possible for me to devote myself intensively to painting. I discovered the variety and fascination of having time to further my artistic training.

What interests you most in painting? Continually rediscover, recreate, try out, endure, and learn something new. Never giving up.

What kind of artwork will visitors see, and what meaning do they have for you? I will show paintings on canvas that spring from my imagination, memory, and feelings. My aim is to take the viewer on an imaginary journey.
